VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Janesville, Wis., Aug. 29.

To the Editor of the Janesville Daily Gazette:
I beg leave to call your attention to the following communication in the form of an open letter which I have just received from Lyman G. Wheeler of Milwaukee. As it is written in an earnest endeavor to rectify a gross misrepresentation, I would greatly appreciate it if you would give it all the prominence possible.
"La Follette supporters are covertly circulating a report under cover that Malcolm G. Jeffris of Janesville, Wisconsin, candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator, is a munitions manufacturer. That some time ago he went to Europe and made more contracts with the allies and nearly lost his life in the wreck of a vessel that was hit by a German submarine."
The fact that Thos. B. Jeffery of Kenosha nearly lost his life in the Lusitania while on his way to attend his automobile business in Europe, his seizure upon as a basis for this story in the hopes that many people will just die the recollection of that incident and refuse it with the candidacy of Malcolm G. Jeffris of the Janesville attorney, who is a candidate for the republican nomination for the United States senate.
"It is a deliberate attempt by falsehood to poison the minds of American citizens of German ancestry against Mr. Jeffris so as to gain support from them."
"Malcolm G. Jeffris' name is spelled differently from that of the Kenosha manufacturer, and they are not members of the same family, but the propaganda in common conversation has such similar sound that the La Follette supporters think they can make their scheme pass without detection."
(Signed) Lyman G. Wheeler.
President Milwaukee County Jeffris Club.

Editor Voice of the People.

Janesville Daily Gazette.
Dear Sir:—Have at hand the edition of the 16th inst., and respectfully beg to take exception to your article on page two entitled, "Wisconsin Guilty of a Reputation for Good Behavior." etc.
I take exception to that dealing with the Illinois men. I just returned from San Antonio and Leon Springs, where I was a member of Company G, First Illinois Infantry. The article you printed written by Private Agnew, Company G, First Illinois Infantry would make any Illinois soldier's hair stand on end. How he can write to a city daily and say the Illinois boys insulted the people along the way, mutilated railroad property, etc., is more than I can comprehend. He was either sadly misinformed or drew on his imagination as a rookie.

I was proud to be there with an Illinois regiment serving in the First Wisconsin Volunteers in 1898, and attending eight annual encampments at Camp Douglas.
For the information of Private Agnew and my friends in Rock and Green counties, I want to say that the First Illinois Infantry is the best state organization of its kind in the United States. Our regiment made a trip last summer to the two fairs on the coast and we received the finest welcomes you ever saw in all the large cities en route.
As for the hike to Leon Springs where hundreds fell out, you can only blame the fast cadence we used. No Wisconsin regiment nor any regular soldier could have retained such a pace.
The army would be better off, and without the army you have no country. If such reports as Private Agnew's could not find circulation, Wisconsin is not far from Illinois, and if we start knocking what can you expect from Maine and Washington.

Respectfully,
BEN E. POLLOCK,

Stored-Up Energy

Everybody needs it—stored for emergency in a well-developed, well-preserved, well-nourished body and brain.

Grape-Nuts food stands preeminent as a builder of this kind of energy. It is made of the entire nutriment of whole wheat and barley, two of the richest sources of food strength.

Grape-Nuts also includes the vital mineral elements of the grain, so much emphasized in these days of investigation of real food values.

Crisp, ready to eat, easy to digest, wonderfully nourishing and delicious.

Blueberries plentiful on Michigan peninsula.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 30.—The blueberry fields hereabouts are more productive this year than ever before in the history of this county. This is indicated by the large shipments which have been made from many cities in the peninsula.

Large settlements of people active in the berry business are found on all sides. They live in tents as a rule, although many cottages have been built where the berries are most plentiful.

The strawberry, blackberry and raspberry crops this year were also very large.

Commission Hold Open Proposed Grading Improvements Follow.

King Kicks Registered Yesterday.

Nine second ward property owners appeared at the hearing held by the city commission yesterday relative to street improvements and grading in that section of the city.

As a result the matter was held open until next week, only one street, Vista avenue from Logan street to Fremont, being designated for the grading and the assessments of benefit and damages as reported by the board of public works.

A communication from the board of education asking for $2,000 and suggesting that the city borrow the money was received. Mayor Fathens was instructed to secure the money for the schools. It will be paid back from the school moneys following the January tax collections.

A report submitted by the superintendent of Streets Goodman showed that up to two weeks previous to Saturday, 3,038½ yards of stone had been used in the grading of Vista avenue.

A petition was received from property owners on Clinton street requesting that proposed paving improvements on that street be deferred to 1917.

Bills amounting to $2,350 for labor and material for the first two weeks of August were allowed.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 30.—The blueberry fields hereabouts are more productive this year than ever before in the history

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Answered by Alfred W. McCann.

Do you consider one-tenth of 1 per cent of benzoate of soda in food injurious to health?

C. A. In my views on the sodium benzoate question are based in part on an experiment which the bureau of chemistry of the United States conducted in 1914.

In this classical investigation a poison squad was employed with a view of determining the effect of the human system.

The experiment was characterized by the extreme care which was exercised in the minutest detail. Each subject underwent a thorough medical examination, and all who exhibited any inherited predisposition to disease, or any time during the year preceding the investigation, were excluded. The experimental subjects were unacquainted to the time a long period preceding the experiment, so that the effects observed would be the result of the action of the preservative and not due to an organic condition with which the subject might enter the experiment.

For a long time following the period during which the preservatives were ingested the subjects were watched with extreme care by those in charge of the experiment. It was during this period that the most indicative results were observed.

The experiment undertaken by the government inspired large manufacturing interests to conduct similar investigations with the view of doing away entirely with preservatives of an objectionable nature.

With these interests the bureau of chemistry collaborated. The results of these investigations," Dr. Wiley wrote, "have shown that there is not a single article of food which has been commonly preserved by benzoic acid or benzoate of soda which cannot be preserved and offered to the consumer in perfect condition without the aid of any chemical preservative.

"This fact has been completely demonstrated in the case of cider, grape juice, mince meat, jelly, jams, catsup, preserves and other articles of food."

"It is believed that the results of this investigation will neither work hardship to any manufacturing interest nor interfere in any way with any legitimate business. At the same time it will indicate to the consumer, the important truth that the use of benzoic acid or benzoate of soda as a preserving medium is not without danger; that its effects are always injurious; that to injury, and that its exclusion from food products is desirable, not only to conform to the food and drugs act but also for hygienic reasons."

"The greater care which is required in the manufacture of food products without the use of benzoic acid or benzoate of soda, necessitating the use of a higher quality of raw material, would otherwise place the industries which produce these preservatives in a position to produce a better product, and secure for their products a greater reputation."

In the experiment of 1914 the visible effects of the preservative under question were extremely marked. The subjects were seized with indigestion, and others from severe headache, and others from nausea. A few took to vomiting.

The men lost weight not only while taking the chemical, but continued to reduce abnormally in the after period.

The urine examinations revealed a morbid condition. The test gave more microscopic bodies during the preservative period than during the period following the fact that the use of benzoic acid and sodium benzoate was accompanied by an increased destruction of the body tissue.

So pronounced was the secretion of hippuric acid that no conclusion of national origin other than that the kidneys were functioning under a heavy burden.

Assimilation was seriously interfered with. While the men were taking the quantities of 0.025 gm. showing that the process by which food normally passed from the digestive tract into the circulation was seriously retarded.

The results of this investigation lead to the inevitable conclusion that benzoic acid and sodium benzoate are both injurious to the system, and that their presence in edible products is so dangerous that very influence these preservatives out of food entirely.

Notwithstanding the facts, established by one of the most careful and critical scientific researches ever undertaken, the Remsen referee board benzoate question gave to benzoic acid and benzoate of soda a white wash of sufficient value to please its users, although scientific men have been quarreling over it ever since.

The referee board found that both these preservatives, sodium benzoate and benzoic acid, while giving rise to unfavorable symptoms when ingested in large quantities, are when consumed for a short time in the small amounts usually found in food, namely, one-tenth of 1 per cent—entirely without ill effect. Nothing was said about its effects when consumed for a long time or by persons in delicate health.

In this controversy I am inclined toward the view to which the government's investigation, under the direction of Dr. Wiley, must necessarily give rise. My reason for taking this attitude is based on the belief that once a product, under conditions which permit of accurate judgment, is found to be injurious that very fact is sufficient to justify its condemnation. When a locomotive engineer, on account of fog or other circumstance, is unable to tell whether the signals by which he is guided are red or green he is instructed to regard them as danger signals always. By the law of chance they are just as apt to be green as red, but by regarding them as red he is sure to avoid danger.

If benzoate of soda has been shown to be injurious in one case and harmful in another, the most intelligent way to deal with it is in my opinion, to apply a rule similar to that of the cautious engineer.

I am decidedly opposed to one-tenth of 1 per cent of benzoate of soda in food, or to any other quantity, however large or small.

UNIQUE CHEW IS MELLOW "SPEAR HEAD"

Famous Tobacco with the Sweet, Tasty, Wholesome Relish

AN OLD-TIME FAVORITE

Chewing is the one best way to use tobacco, because it's the only way the choice leaf can get next to your tongue and give you all the benefit of the wholesome, digestive juices stored up in it by nature.

But your chew should be in plug form—the purest, most natural form into which tobacco leaf is made.

Among plug tobaccos, Spear Head, for a third of a century, has held first place as the unique chew. Its distinctive flavor is supremely delicious—a ripe, relishy flavor not found in any other tobacco made.

A luscious chew of Spear Head braces up a lazy appetite and makes you feel fresher and snappier.

Spear Head is the very best chew that money can buy. Ask your dealer for a 5c or 10c cut.

Beer Great Toner For Athletes

READ what C. T. Flanagan, Famous Athlete and Founder of the Irish-Canadian Club, says: "Beer is the best upbuilder and sustainer next to beef steak and is essentially an athletic food. Nearly all trainers of note prescribe beer, in fact every American athletic record is held by men who follow this principle."

Another celebrated United States Athlete, Abel R. Kiviat, says: "I have used beer moderately for the past four years during my career as a runner. I have found it to be of great value as an aid to digestion and honestly believe that it is beneficial and without question, a body builder. I drink beer moderately while in training, especially with my principal meal of the day."

Their experience is the experience of countless others. Athletic work is strenuous, requires endurance and necessitates rapid body rebuilding.

Pedigreed Stock

WE no longer value mere pedigree in people as highly as we did centuries ago. Too many modern self-made men have made their grandfather's deeds look small.

But we still value pedigree in horses.

And pedigree in manufactured articles is fast becoming paramount. "Who makes it?" is many times a clincher as a sales argument.

Look at the Diamond Tire.

A Diamond was the first pneumatic automobile tire in America (1899)—To-day is the most pneumatic of fabric tires—a nimble tire and strong, a comfortable tire to ride upon.

It was the first to establish a record of only 1% returned through dealers for adjustment. Always first in the search for the wear proof rubber. The new "Velvet Rubber" tread stock in Diamond Tires actually outwears steel, by test, three to one.

A leader in the development of the Non-Skid tread. The modern "Squeegie" tread gives you a smooth tread ride with Non-Skid security.

A leader in extra mileage. Cases are rare where a Diamond does not outlive its guarantee. Excessive mileages are frequent.

Always first in price. The "Fair List" Price of Diamonds is the price at which we offer them, with no explanations and no excuses. You will find this price low.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President—
CHARLES E. HUGHES.
For Vice-President—
CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.
(To be voted on at the November election.)

VOTE FOR THESE ON SEPTEMBER 5TH:

For United States Senator—
MALCOLM G. JEFFRIS.
For Governor—
EMANUEL L. PHILLIPS.
For Lieut. Governor—
MARSHALL COUSINS.
For Secretary of State—
C. GEORGE L. HARRINGTON.
For State Treasurer—
HENRY JOHNSON.
For Attorney General—
EMMETT R. HICKS.
For State Senator—
LAURENCE E. CUNNINGHAM.
For Assembly, 1st District—
LAURENCE C. WHITTET.
For Assembly, 2nd District—
ALBERT WINEGAR.

Search for these names on your ballot and be sure to put a cross after each name.

Remember some of the most important issues of this campaign will be settled on Primary Day, September 5th. You cannot afford to wait until November to vote for U. S. Senator and State officers.

STOP AND THINK.

Political history is going to be made and unmade on Tuesday next. Wisconsin is going to be redeemed from the throng of the ultra progressive regime forever or it is going to free itself of the thimble and the burden of the "Old Man of the Sea" off from its shoulders. It is up to the voters to decide. They are the sovereign power of the state and their final decision will settle the problem that is now troubling politicians.

It is the duty of every citizen to cast his ballot according to his best judgment. It should not be any snap thought affair but after careful consideration of the pros and cons of the entire situation. Stop and think before you vote. Consider the claims of the various candidates from all angles. Do not be swept away with the old idea that a promise before election is never kept afterwards. That a candidate for office on the republican ticket may be a democrat in disguise.

This is a republican place we are told. Hughes is nominated for presidency by the republicans and in order to give him a working majority down in congress the voters of Wisconsin should send to the United States senate a man who is truly American and a true republican—Malcolm G. Jeffris. He has endorsed the republican national platform and is in harmony with state affairs that look toward better government for the people, by the people, and of the people.

Go further down the line and cast your ballot for Emanuel L. Phillips, the governor who has made good despite the efforts of the "tax-eaters" to defeat his measures. Who is the target for the lying misrepresentations of the army of politicians seeking his seat. Behind him place a legislature that will aid him in his work. Do not take half-way measures, but give him the support he deserves.

Vote for L. E. Cunningham of Beloit for state senator to represent Rock and Walworth counties in the twenty-second senatorial district. Senator Cunningham has served his district well during his four years in office and deserves re-election. Vote for L. C. Whittet of Edgemoor as assemblyman from the first Rock county district. Vote for Albert Winegar of Beloit in the second district. Both men are tried and true and their value to the next legislature is imperative that they be re-elected and re-elected.

But first, last and always, get out and vote. Stop and think what would be the consequences if you voted for Hughes and then sent down to Washington a man not in tune with republican policies. Think what would be the result if you nominated Phillips, and sent political enemies to Madison to become members of the legislature. Stop and then think it over and vote for the conservative republican candidates and be certain that you have cast your ballot intelligently.

OF LOCAL INTEREST.

The coming traction engine demonstration at Madison early in September is of interest to Rock county farmers in more ways than is at first thought. It shows new methods, new ideas of farming that are adaptable to even the small farm. It will demonstrate methods that low land can be plowed and planted and crops grown on what is now simply a hayfield. It will illustrate conditions that exist in every community and demonstrate how they can be overcome. To Janesville it is also particularly interesting in view of the fact of the establishment of the Janesville Tractor company plant in this city less than a year ago which is making strides toward recognition as rapidly as an infant industry can be expected to.

The more the average property-owner of large tracts can learn about his farm and best methods of handling same, the more economical cost the more valuable becomes his land.

ARMY SERVICE.

What will become of the national guard when it is released from border service? Many reports agree that the boys will resign by the thousands. They have done their duty. It will be someone else's turn then. Let George do it. Who can blame them?

If this is the case, it will then be more than ever necessary to make United States army service more attractive. But enlistments have been coming hard. Many of our leading citizens deplore this apparent lack of patriotism.

Yet to a man of ambition and spirit, $15 a month, even with board and clothes, does not look very bad. Every one would like to encourage enlistments. The recruiting offices have pretty pictures showing the pleasant side of army life. But $15 a month doesn't compete with present wage levels. Particularly if a man has a little family.

A certain type of men will always be attracted into the army no matter what the pay. To fellows liking adventure it seems attractive. But after a year tending the lawns at some army post, the romance all fades out. Patrolling the cactus plains of the border would seem little better. There is a chance down there of course that one could pot a Mexican. But not much satisfaction in paying an opponent so ignorant of the rules of the game.

So life will attract solid, substantial, persevering fellows, when a living chance is offered. And not much before. The army needs something beside mere rovers. It needs men who will stick right to it, with the hope of working up at least to the lower commands which are fairly well paid. But Uncle Sam will have to "loosen up" a bit to get them.

It is claimed that troops being transported to the border should at least be given the coaches in which the Civil war veterans were carried, and not required to travel in those used for the veterans of the previous Mexican war.

The famine in news print paper makes all kinds of circularization and publicity by printer's ink more costly, but you can still get publicity through newspaper advertising for just the same money.

After clipping an interesting war story out of an exchange and marking it "Special Cable Dispatch From Our War Correspondent," some editors wonder why newspapers don't have as much influence as they used to.

It would be just as well for the political speakers to remember that their audiences are not primary school boys, that they read newspapers and have heard politicians talk before.

Prof. Muensterberg predicts a future alliance of Germany, England, and the United States. This will probably happen a short time after the republican and democratic parties unite.

Many people rejoice in the greater freedom of the modern Sunday, with the boys getting drowned in bathing, and the grown-ups getting smashed on the motor roads.

There is a growing feeling that it does not pay to cultivate a garden, considering what can be done in the rural districts with an automobile, a bag, and a dark night.

The National Association of Organists have been in convention at Springfield, Mass., but it is denied that any of them were accompanied by monkeys with a red cap.

Judging from the reports from the ball grounds, "jailbird" and "dirty blackguard" are the mildest and most inoffensive terms one ever thinks of applying to an umpire.

Symptoms of illness shown by the boys are much less likely to indicate infant paralysis than a desire to escape being called on to help get in the hay.

Confidence is expressed that the political parties will make good nominations for offices in all cases where they do not expect to win the election.

All this fuss about Thomas Mott Osborne at Sing Sing prison has been caused by his unheard of discovery that a prisoner is a human being.

The presidential candidates both endorse woman suffrage with alacrity, but so far have not advocated disfranchising the men.

It is hoped that anyway a few errand boys will be caught and punished for the New York munitions explosion.

Both parties indignantly denounce extravagant appropriations when made by their opponents.

Serbes, Macedonia City Mentioned In War News 'Dates Back to Xerxes'

SERES—Three column italics.—Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—The suddenly developed Bulgarian counter-attacks in northeastern Macedonia brings the important town of Seres once more into the limelight of world history. This ancient city, situated on the navigable Lake Takhino, forty miles west of the Aegean port of Kavala, and forty-three miles by rail northeast of Salonika, is the subject of today's war geography bulletin, issued by the National Geographic society from its Washington headquarters which says:

"With a history dating back to the days of Xerxes' memorable retreat from Greece after the disastrous Battle of Salamis, the town of Seres was, until the recent partitioning of Ottoman possessions in the Balkan peninsula, the chief city of the Turkish district of Salonika and was noted as the center of the Turkish woolen industry as well as an important port for tobacco, hides and carpet trade. According to the latest available statistics it is a place of 30,000 inhabitants and is situated in the midst of one of the most fertile regions in the world. In fact, Golden Plain (Altin Ovasi) is the name given the district by the Turks. For many miles in every direction from the shores of Lake Takhino there are fields of prosperous, gleaming white hamlets in settings of luxuriant green.

"Serres commands a splendid strategic passageway up the Valley of the Trumia river to the environs of the Bulgarian capital, Sofia, which lies a hundred miles to the north.

"In ancient times the town was known to the Athenians as Seris or Sirhae. It is mentioned by Herodotus as one of the places in the line of retreat before Xerxes' army in the fifth century before the Christian era. It will live in the history of Rome's glory as the camp where the great general and aristocrat Lucius Aemilius Paulus received a reputation from the Greek king Perseus whose army he defeated at the battle of—dana in 168 B. C. The king and his three children were captured and taken to Rome to grace the occasion of the victorious general's triumphal entry. Because of his achievement in adding Macedonia to the empire Paulus received the surname Macedonicus.

"For more than fourteen centuries Seres played a waiting role in world history, but in 1345 the great statesman, soldier and lawgiver, Stephen, affectionately called Dushan, in this city assumed the title of Emperor of the Serbs and Romanians (Romans) of the Bulgars and the Albanians. For a time Seres was the capital of the new empire created by Stephen and a bulwark state between the aggressive Turks and the Christian countries of Europe. As the Byzantine empire was slowly disintegrating the forceful Serbian emperor met with a great success in his effort to weld Serbs, Bulgars, Greeks and Albanians into a strong Slavic power. Macedonia and Albania were taken from Greece, and an army was recruited from these provinces and sent to Serbia for an expedition against Constantinople. While on the march toward the city on the Bosphorus the emperor was seized with a sudden illness and died in great agony, probably a victim of a treacherous poisoner. His son and successor, Urosh, a boy of nineteen when called upon to assume command, did not inherit the genius of his father, and the Serb-Greek empire was soon disrupted.

"Serres remained a Serbian city, however, for nearly a hundred years, as was captured in the middle of the 15th century by Sultan Murad II, and remained under Turkish dominion until quite recently, when as one of the spoils of the war waged by Balkan nations against the Turks in Europe, it fell to Greece.

"One-half the population of Seres is Bulgarian, one-fourth is Greek, one-seventh is Turkish and most of the remainder is Jewish.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND VETERANS MARCHING OVER HILLS OF KANSAS CITY TODAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 30.—Fifteen thousand grizzled fighters of the Civil war marched over the downtown section today in the annual Grand Army of the Republic parade.

With a score of life and drum corps beating time and brass bands playing national airs, the gray haired veterans moved slowly over the line which included many hills.

The streets were thronged with spectators who cheered each state contingent as it passed and the veterans waved their hats and saluted almost continuously.

W. F. Calhoun, commander of the Department of Illinois, and his state organization headed the procession, followed by the Wisconsin and Pennsylvania departments. The Ohio and New York veterans were next in line. Then followed the Southern and Western departments. Missouri brought up the rear.

As the parade swung into Main street there were many stragglers but they fought on bravely to pass in review before their commander-in-chief, R. M. La Follette, of Cincinnati, and his staff and state and city officials who occupied the reviewing stand.

MENOMONIE MAN'S WATER GAS TAP THE PLACE OF GASOLINE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Menominee, Mich., Aug. 30.—With gasoline prices soaring and with more automobiles being sold daily W. A. Lehmann of this city reports that he is about to become wealthy through a compound which he claims will take the place of gasoline.

"It is simply a water gas," says Lehmann, "and I figure that a gallon of the mixture, costing 80 cents will run a 50 h. p. engine 12 hours."

Lehmann, who claims to have given the materials which make up his wonderful discovery.

MICHIGAN RUSSIANS LOSE IN SILVER BANK EMBEZZLEMENT

LOCATE PLACE WHERE GERMAN PRINCE DIED EARLY IN CONFLICT

Geographical Society Learns Identity of Burying Spot of Prince Maximilian.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—"Many American tourists have stopped over night in the Trappist monastery where, according to a report recently published in a Paris newspaper, the youthful Prince Maximilian died of wounds in the third month of the European war. After nearly two years of mysterious silence concerning the fate of this member of the royal family of Germany, it is now said that Hazebruck is the place of burial of the Kaiser's nephew. This town is only a few miles south of Ypres, on the border and about 18 miles from Ypres where the Germans in their first onrush drove toward the sea were definitely checked by a flooding of the lowlands," according to today's war geography bulletin of the National Geographic society, issued from its Washington headquarters.

"When peace is eventually declared a search will doubtless be made in the humble little cemetery of Hazebruck to recover the body of the royal sub-lieutenant and carry it back to his mother, the youngest sister of the Kaiser.

"The fighting to the east of Hazebruck was exceptionally severe during the early months of the war, for the Kaiser's nephew, 38 years of age, was a place of extraordinary strategic value, owing to the fact that it is the junction point of railroads leading to the North Sea port of Dunkirk, 25 miles to the north, to Arras, 70 miles to the south, to Cambrai, 38 miles to the northwest, and to Lille, 29 miles to the southeast. The German advance never reached as far as Hazebruck, the battle line now runs north and south between Lille and Hazebruck, about 16 miles east of the latter.

"The town of Godewaersvelde, where Prince Maximilian is supposed to have received his fatal wound, is the last village before crossing the French border into Belgium on the Hazebruck-Ypres line. Above the little town towers the Mont des Cats, on top of which is situated the modern Trappist monastery where the wounded officer was nursed.

"The tourists who frequented the monastery in the days before the war were those who wished to take advantage of its hospitable walls for a night's lodging in order to get an early start for delightful walking excursions over the wooded slopes of Mont Noir and Mont de Lille on the Belgian frontier.

"The Trappists are a flourishing order of Cistercian monks who derive their name from the monastery of La Grande Trappe, at Soligny-la-Trippe, 100 miles southwest of Paris, where Abbot Jean le B. de Rance instituted sweeping reforms in the middle of the 17th century. De Rance, who at the age of 10 had been made commendatory abbot of this 12th century monastery of La Trappe, after being converted from a worldly life, secured permission from Louis XIV to pension the old monks who had ceased to comply with their obligations. He established a new group of Cistercians who adopted the most rigorous rules for fasting, devotional service and silence. The expulsion of the order during the French revolution only seemed to stimulate its growth in its city of refuge—Val Sainte, Switzerland. A quarter of a century after their flight, the Trappists returned to their original home and in the course of the century which has intervened between that day and this the order has spread to many parts of the world, including a congregation of 50 Chinese monks, others in Japan, Asia Minor, Canada and the United States. In Natal the Kaffirs and among their activities in this part of the world is the printing of books in the Zulu language. There are also Trappist nurseries, the first being that of Les Clairat at Chartres, which adopted de Rance's reforms during his lifetime."

CONGRESS EXPENDS OVER 2,347 MILLION YET DECRIES WASTE

Democrats Denounce Profligate Waste of Money But Far Exceed Republican Expenditures.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)
New York, Aug. 29.—Congress spends $2,350,000,000. From the time of the confounding terms and conflicting charges, it is now possible to give the correct figures showing the amount of public money which the session of congress just drawing to a close has spent. It is 2,347,127,899, or in more intelligible terms 2,347 million dollars. This is the total to date of the money which this session has "appropriated" plus that which it has authorized to be expended, but the bills for which will not come in until after the close of the next fiscal year. The total appropriations amount to $3,710,482,722. To this figure must be added "authorizations" for which appropriations are not made, but for which congress has obligated itself to make appropriations of $638,643,977. The total appropriations (two sessions) amounted to $2,054,000,000. The appropriations of this congress (two sessions) will total at least $3,400,000,000. The increase in the appropriations due to preparedness is $390,000,000, which leaves an increase of $200,000,000 of actual appropriations over last session, to be accounted for entirely by what Senator Smoot has termed "unequaled extravagance and unexampled inefficiency unsurpassed." The democratic denunciation of republican statements. One reads:
"We denounce the profligate waste of money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of republican congresses, which have kept taxes high and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toil. We demand a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government and a reduction in the number of useless offices, the salaries of which drain the substance of the people."
The other reads: "Our pledges are made to be kept while in office as well as to be relied upon during the campaign."
The democratic managers have been sending distress messages to Washington, begging their leaders in congress to try to make some better fiscal showing. The above figures and quotations show the reason why.
Hard to Please: When Mr. Hughes was exposing the gross abuse of civil service reform by the Wilson administration, its shameful spoils mongering, etc., the democratic managers severely criticized him because his speeches were "destructive and not constructive." Having disposed, for the time being, of one phase of democratic incompleteness Mr. Hughes has now been discussing the tariff. In one address in California, for instance, he said: "I do propose that we shall have a constructive tariff policy which will foster, not cripple, which will build up, not destroy, which will count American achievement to be honorable and not something to be reduced; which will set the United States ahead, worthy of competing in this economic struggle with any nation on earth." And from the west comes the news that Mr. Hughes' tariff speeches are "most enthusiastically received." And yet the democratic managers are not satisfied. They declared today that Hughes was "talking time-worn drift" and that republican votes are being made there by the discussion of the tariff and of a true Americanism which will make an American proud of his place anywhere in the world, from Mexico. And the democratic managers insist that the republican speakers are making "spread eagle" speeches. In fact, the distrust expressed at democratic headquarters is so pronounced that one is led to suspect that the democratic managers would fire every republican speaker, including Mr. Hughes, if they had the firing power.

Unduly Suspicious: According to reports from Washington the president and his advisors are indignant because the union labor men, who are conducting the railway negotiations have let it leak out that they are skeptical of Mr. Wilson's sincerity; that they point out his professed friendship for labor with some measure of suspicion. Possibly they should not have let their skepticism leak out, but it is not surprising that they should be skeptical and suspicious in view of what Dr. Wilson has himself said about labor and labor unions. Said Dr. Wilson on June 13, 1909, in a public address: "You know what the usual standard of the employer is in regard to it is to give as little as he may for his wages. Labor is standardized by the trades unions and this is the standard to which the employer is made to conform. No one is suffered to do more than the average workman can do; in some trades and handicrafts no one is suffered to do more than the least skillful of his fellows can do within the hour allotted to a day's labor, and all may work out of hours at all, or volunteer anything beyond the minimum. It is not only military but also industrial, such a regulation of labor is. It is so unprofitable to the employer that in some trades it will presently bring about a thing to attempt anything at all. He has to stop together than operate at an inevitable and invariable loss." And on March 1, 1907, Woodrow Wilson said, in a public speech: "I speak to you exclusively of the capitalist boss, who is another, as formidable an enemy to equality and freedom of opportunity as is, and that is the class formed by the labor organizations and leaders of the country."

Women Support Hughes: The National Woman's Republican association is organizing women of all classes and interests to work for republican principles and for Hughes because they stand for progress and prosperity. They urge women to support the republican party "because it stands for preparedness, for adequate protection, means whereby permanent prosperity can be assured; for economy in addition candidates stand for nationalism." Mrs. Helen Varick Boswell, president of the association, says: "We are urging women to support the republican party and its presidential candidates also because we desire progress for nationalism. At a time in our history when, more than ever, sectionalism must have a leader and a party which speaks and acts in no uncertain terms for a unified America, a national out-look, a balanced government, and a nationalized policy, we want to see the importance of a national point of view."

Women in business realize uncertainty is fatal to the spirit of all enterprise and that it reacts upon every man and woman employed. We feel that if women as a whole realized the value of a protective policy they would give their time and their enthusiasm to the party that stands for it. They are out to educate women to see the value of it.
"We urge the support of all republican policy, and we urge you to help to achieve for this country a national administration which will insure prosperous, healthy American homes, real contented citizens."
Infantile Paralysis: The scourge which has already cost the lives of nearly 2,000 New York children, and partially paralyzed thousands of others, seems to be under control. Probably the most valuable discovery which has resulted from it is that the common house fly is the chief carrier of the contagion.

NEWS NOTES—MIDLAND

Kathryn Williams, the well-known film star whose last big picture was "The Ne'er-Do-Well," has resigned from Selig and signed for a long-time contract with Morrocco-Pallas of the Paramount program.
Miss Williams' success in pictures has not been on the "overnight" variety. She entered filmdom seven years ago in company with Mary Pickford, Arthur Johnson and other members of the "old guard" under D. W. Griffith.

In addition to acting she is also a member of the Authors League. Among her offerings in this field are "The Will Be Done," "The Last Dance," "Strange Case of Talmat Lind," "Pride of Edgerton" and many others, all produced. She is to start her initial production next month.

SHE'S GOOD AT LIMERICKS

Margaret Shelby, since her arrival from New York in Los Angeles several weeks ago, has had the enjoyment of but twenty-four hours with her sister, May Miles Minter, at Santa Barbara. Miss Shelby was immediately spoken for by Oliver Morosco for the Grace Livingston Furank theater, so has been kept busy in Los Angeles and this play ever since. Mrs. Florence Shelby, mother of Mary and Margaret, divides her time between Santa Barbara and Mary and Los Angeles and Margaret. The latter has a little apartment not far from the Burbank theater and her pastimes are writing limericks and devoting herself and tiny kitchen to teas and candy-making.

"The Devil's Needle," the latest picture starring Tully Marshall and Norma Talmadge, has been rejected by the Ohio board of censors. Tully Marshall played a dope fiend in "The Devil's Needle," but they apparently won't let him do it in the movies. "The Devil's Needle" deals with a dope dealer. When it was exhibited in New York recently the critics reported it harmless and completely satisfying.

Charles Chary is now playing a big role in the Geraldine Farrar picture. He has several successful roles in recent pictures, but his greatest success being a heavy lead in "The Honor System," by Henry Christien Warnick. He also appears as supporting player in "Each Pearl a Tear."

Adelaide Woods has completed her engagement and by the way of recreation is moving her household goods from one shrine to another meaning merely an exchange of bungalows.

Morris Grants a Favor in His Characteristic Way.

"Where did you get that?" Morris Southy popped in front of a rolypoly puppy that was in the middle of the path, looking up at him out of a patch of gray hair.

"Wir, Hal Mor-ton brought it over and gave it to us. He has one just like it. There was a note of anxiety in the boy's voice. He gathered up the fat little fellow in his arms. Mother said: 'Take it back to the boy. You know how I feel about dogs. The father strode on up the path. The child sat down in the grass, folding the dog in his arms and crying noisily. Frank ran (breathlessly) into the kitchen.

"Mother, we can't keep the puppy," Mar-jan bent and whispered in his ear. "Don't say anything about it. Perhaps father had not thought how much you would enjoy the dog." She kissed him and he ran out to his brother much heartened in his spirit. Had they not heartened to help them? Mother could do most everything.

Mar-jan went to the living room. Florence on his lap. She was telling him excitedly about the dog. As Mar-jan entered, Morris said: "We cannot keep the dog, dear. I do not think dogs are safe for little girls to play with."

"Morris, I wish you would allow the boys to keep the dog. It is a Scotch terrier and will not grow big. It need never come into the house."

"Yes, father, do let us keep it. I love the dog," pleaded the child. "How did the boy happen to bring the dog here?" asked Morris acidly. "Is this a scheme of yours to get the children the pet you have talked so much about?"

"I knew nothing about it, of course. Hal Mor-jan found a place where they had a couple of these boys to dispose of and he knew the boy was the friend of dogs, so he very kindly brought it over. I told him to leave it, for I was sure that you would consent to their keeping it."

"Well, you thought wrong. I will more bother than a child and we have our yard full of children all the time. That is enough. I do not propose to have a yelping pup adding to the noise," Morris rose and set the dog on the floor, telling her to run and hide. He then the door closed behind him.

"Why in the world did you let the boy leave the dog here? You know how I feel about them."

"Because, Morris, I want the boys to have the dog. My brother's dog, and I know what a source of happiness it was to all of us. They will not need to have children here to play with. Indeed, I would rather they played alone so."

"Really," interrupted Morris, "you do not seem to understand the English language. Mariaus said I did not want the dog and I will not have it."

"And I say that I do want it," Mariaus checked with a pink with effort. It cost her to say this. Morris stared at her in astonishment. She went up to him and laid her hand on his arm.

"Oh, my dear, if you knew how much I want the children to own a pet, not don't me this. Will you not do it for me? I have not asked a favor of you for a very long time. For do you, to make me happy, will you not let the dog stay?"

Morris stood staring into his wife's face. He was so astonished to have her hold out against his expressed command that he had hardly had time to get angry at her. She had called only of his own wish and thought. Here was a chance to prove that he sacrificed his desires for their happiness. He was not a selfish man.

"Well, my dear, I will try and see how I can get the dog. It is a Scotch terrier and will not grow big. It need never come into the house."

Morris stood staring into his wife's face. He was so astonished to have her hold out against his expressed command that he had hardly had time to get angry at her. She had called only of his own wish and thought. Here was a chance to prove that he sacrificed his desires for their happiness. He was not a selfish man.

"Well, my dear, I will try and see how I can get the dog. It is a Scotch terrier and will not grow big. It need never come into the house."

"Yes, father, do let us keep it. I love the dog," pleaded the child. "How did the boy happen to bring the dog here?" asked Morris acidly. "Is this a scheme of yours to get the children the pet you have talked so much about?"

"I knew nothing about it, of course. Hal Mor-jan found a place where they had a couple of these boys to dispose of and he knew the boy was the friend of dogs, so he very kindly brought it over. I told him to leave it, for I was sure that you would consent to their keeping it."

"Well, you thought wrong. I will more bother than a child and we have our yard full of children all the time. That is enough. I do not propose to have a yelping pup adding to the noise," Morris rose and set the dog on the floor, telling her to run and hide. He then the door closed behind him.

"Why in the world did you let the boy leave the dog here? You know how I feel about them."

"Because, Morris, I want the boys to have the dog. My brother's dog, and I know what a source of happiness it was to all of us. They will not need to have children here to play with. Indeed, I would rather they played alone so."

"Really," interrupted Morris, "you do not seem to understand the English language. Mariaus said I did not want the dog and I will not have it."

"And I say that I do want it," Mariaus checked with a pink with effort. It cost her to say this. Morris stared at her in astonishment. She went up to him and laid her hand on his arm.

"Oh, my dear, if you knew how much I want the children to own a pet, not don't me this. Will you not do it for me? I have not asked a favor of you for a very long time. For do you, to make me happy, will you not let the dog stay?"

thing but summery, little children went about thus exposed while their mothers wore heavy clothing. How many robust, healthy children could expose their legs in this manner and escape rheumatism? If doctors will advise mothers to keep the children properly clothed, there will be no great number of colds and infantile paralysis.

Answer—Nine out of ten children so afflicted have never indulged in the luxury of socks and sandals. On the contrary, summer and winter, children are injured by excessive clothing. Whenever a child desires to go barefoot, let him do so by all means. The human skin is altogether too much cooped up by the open air. In my opinion, no harm comes from leaving off clothing, if the weather enjoys it. I advise, and in your own home I insist upon the children going barefoot whenever they wish.

Household Hints

LEFTOVER MEAT DISHES.
Boiled or roasted veal makes a nice dish chopped fine and warmed up with just enough water to moisten it, and a little butter, salt and pepper added. A little nutmeg and the juice of a lemon improve it (none of these if you are sensitive to them). Boiled onions or turnips are good mixed with a couple of lemons cut in slices.

Fresh corned beef is good minced with fine boiled potatoes and warmed up with salt, pepper and water. Some people use the gravy that they have left over from the meat, but it is not as good for the stomach as it can be clarified and used for other purposes.

Boiled onions or turnips are good mixed with minced meat instead of potatoes.

Veal and mutton are good cut into small strips and warmed with boiled potatoes cut in slices, pepper, salt, a little water—add butter just before you take it up.

Roast beef and mutton, if not previously cooked, are good cut in slices and just scorched on a grid-iron.

When warmed over, should be on the fire long enough to get well heated through it on the fire. Most of the juices of the meat will be extracted and render it very indigestible.

Cold fowls are nice jointed and warmed with a little water, then taken up and fried in butter till brown. A little flour should be sprinkled on the fowls before frying. Thicken the water that the fowls were warmed in, add a little salt, pepper and butter and turn it over the fowl.

SOME PUDDINGS.
Cottage Pudding—One cup sugar, half cup butter, one egg, one cup sweet milk, three level teaspoons baking powder, three cups flour, half teaspoon lemon or vanilla flavor. Beat sugar, butter and egg together, add milk, flour and baking powder and flavor. Stir till light. Bake in small bread pan before putting in oven. When done, cut in squares and serve with sauce made of two tablespoons butter, cup sugar, two tablespoons flour wet with a little cream, then add one pint boiling water, let boil three minutes, stir all the time. After taking from fire add half teaspoon lemon or vanilla flavor.

DATE PUDDING—One pound dates, one cup English walnut meats, one egg, one tablespoon flour, salt, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half cup sugar. Cut up dates, cover with boiling water for three minutes, then drain and add to mixture. Bake 45 minutes in very slow oven.

RICE PUDDING—Wash cupful of rice, boil till soft, then drain and wash; add three eggs, half cup butter, half cup sugar, half teaspoon cinnamon, pinch of salt, one-third cup milk. Beat well, pour into well-buttered pan and bake slowly in moderately heated oven.

THREE GOOD PIES
Sour Cream Pie—One cupful thick sour cream, one-half cup sugar, one cup chopped raisins, two eggs, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, a little nutmeg, pinch of salt. Mix together the raisins, sugar, flour, salt and spices and add the sour cream, which should be slightly beaten. Line pie plate with pastry, pour in mixture and bake about twenty-five minutes in moderate oven. Make a meringue of the egg whites and two tablespoons powdered sugar, heap on the pie and cook ten minutes in slow oven.

LEMON PIE—Grated rind and juice of one lemon, one cup sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch, yolk of one egg, one heaping tablespoon butter, one cup boiling water. Mix all together and cook until thick. Have one crust baked and pour this in. Beat the whites of the eggs, sweeten, and frost. Brown in quick oven.

BUTTER SCOTCH PIE—Two cups hot water, two cups brown sugar, lump of butter. Boil while following is being prepared: Yolks of three eggs, three tablespoons flour, mix with two cups of milk, add to the boiling syrup, flavor. Use whites of eggs for frosting. Sprinkle with coconut. This makes two pies.

OUR GREATEST TEACHER

"Better to be driven out from among men than to be disliked by children."—R. H. Dana.

Merry laughter greeted me as I approached the home of my school friend, Ethel, who was caring for her mother's child while the mother went to California for her health.

As I ran up the path I peeked under the wide awning to find my friend's little niece.

Here was a perfect picture—lovely to behold. Little Jean in a dear little delft frock with bunnies painted upon it was enjoying herself to the greatest extent—and with a "grow-up."

When they spied me they tore down the steps exactly like two children, instead of one child and one dignified married woman.

For a while the three of us visited together. Then little Jean had to have her nap. After that came our talk. Although Ethel was always of the happiest and most enviable disposition, it seemed as though new life had been given her and she was once more a young girl.

THOSE MINOR FAULTS
How much happiness married people (and others) lose, how much energy they waste, because they do not learn to take certain things about each other for granted!

A couple who have been married between forty and fifty years were talking at the establishment where I spent part of my summer.

One day he asked her if she knew where the book he had been reading had disappeared to. "I simply laid it down," he said, "and now I can't find it."

"Isn't it somewhere in your room upstairs?" she asked.

"No," he said, "I've just been looking up there."

"You Must Look for Things With Your Elbows."

She went up and came down with the book in less than a minute. "Right on top of the trunk," she said. "In perfectly plain sight. I don't see how you could miss it. I never saw anyone so unobservant in my life. You must look for things with your elbows."

She went on in the same strain for two or three minutes until her husband got up and went into the house, declaring that he would never ask her to look for anything again, he'd rather go without it.

Of course people who cannot find things (or will not make the necessary effort—personally I think that a kind of mental laziness has a good deal to do with the inability) are exasperating. But when you have lived with a person forty years and found out that that is one of his unchangeable characteristics, what is the use of fretting and fuming every time he manifests it?

Married Folks Ought to Help Each Other.

I believe that married folks should try to help each other overcome their faults. And mind you, I don't mean by consoling fault-finding, but by helping them in a kindly spirit to see the failings and then by encouraging and praising every effort to overcome them. But when it becomes evident in the course of human events that certain faults are a practically ineradicable part of the housemate's character, isn't it infinitely wiser to take them for granted instead of fussing about them every time they manifest themselves? Especially when they are minor faults that don't really make such a lot of difference unless you let them?

SOME people think that Ivory is a laundry soap. So it is. But that is not all. It is equally fine for the toilet and bath, and for the same reasons that it is fine in the laundry.

Because it is white, because it is pure, because it is mild, because it lathers freely and rinses easily, because it cannot harm the most delicate fabrics Ivory Soap is unequalled for all laundry work.

Are not these the qualities you desire in toilet soap?

The fact is, you cannot get a better soap for the toilet and bath than the floating Ivory. Do not let its low price make you think otherwise.

SLOW DISEASE DEATH HAS NO COMPENSATION

Industrial Commission Refuses Award to Widow Whose Husband Contracted Tuberculosis at Work.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 29.—Tuberculosis carried Andrew Reitzner, of Appleton, to the grave last November. His widow asked the industrial commission to award compensation on the ground that he had contracted the disease while employed by the Wisconsin Malt & Grain company. The commission today handed down a decision denying compensation because "the workman's compensation act does not compensate for disability from a disease which comes on gradually."

In the proceedings before the commission it was claimed that Reitzner's employment in a grain elevator exposed him at various times to extreme heat and extreme cold and to currents and drafts of air; that the air in the elevator was filled with dust and poisonous gases and that these irritated and infected the man's lungs and caused tuberculosis.

Evidence showed that Reitzner, several months prior to his death, contracted a severe cold and that he told fellow-workmen he intended to "wear it out."

"It is essential," says the commission's decision, "that some definite show any time when the disease was contracted and fail to establish that the deceased came to his death as a result of injury accidentally sustained while in the respondent's employ."

DOWN WHERE THE GALLSTONES GROW

A medium stout person of thirty years or over who has had diseased gallbladder for several years or an attack of typhoid fever, may develop chronic cholecystitis (inflammation of the gallbladder) without having gallstones, or without having gallstones. Indeed, many persons of middle age have gallstones, and three-fourths of the gallstones are women. When a woman of thirty or over begins to take on weight, has spells of indigestion and "gas," or some particular article of food, especially if she has inflamed gums or has much dentistry. Down where the gallstones grow we commonly find the same signs that cause blind dental fillings which cause new trouble; the mouth harbors the focus whence come the germs that produce the gallstones. An X-ray photograph of the gallbladder is the only positive way of discovering these septic foci in many cases. Typhoid bacilli and colon bacilli are not the only germs capable of causing cholecystitis or gallstones.

Nearly evidence of the presence or absence of gallstones is uncertain. Only when the stone happens to contain a considerable portion of lime salts—as about two-thirds of them do—will the X-ray picture disclose their presence. A negative X-ray plate is therefore no proof that gallstones are not present.

When a patient suffers a severe attack of colic, with chill, followed by fever, then sweating, and a few days later appears distinctly jaundiced—he has gallstones.

It is a dreadful shock when even a small gall-stone the size of a pea is passed through the gall-duct into the bowel and so out of the body. Yet there are thousands of credulous folk who swallow huge doses of olive oil, plain or disguised as an alleged gallstone remedy, follow it by an alkali of some sort, then pass gallstones (so they say) the size of marbles without any particular trouble at all. Lumps of soap, nothing more. Oil plus alkali makes soap. Anybody who knows the anatomy of the bile apparatus realizes can influence gallstones in the gall-sac. Olive oil is a food, a laxative, a remedy which diminishes or delays secretions in the stomach (and hence sometimes relieves pain due to an excessive amount of hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice).

The origin of gallstones is always bacterial infection of the bile tract. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Lorelei nodded. "Exactly! We shall live as we choose, only, of course, we can't live together after this." Then her disgust burst its control, and she demanded, bitterly, "Haven't you any strength whatever? Haven't you any balance, Bob?"

He grinned at her cheerfully. "I should say I had. I walked a fence on the way home just to prove it, and I scarcely wobbled. Balance! Strength! Why, you ought to see Jim. They had to carry him."

"Jim? Was Jim with you?"

"In spirit, yes; in body—only for a time. For a brief while we went gayly, hand in hand, then Jim lagged. He's a nice boy, but weak; he falters beneath a load."

She questioned him searchingly and soon learned of Jim's visits, of the dash, of the pool games. When she understood it all her eyes were glowing, but she found nothing to say. At last she got Bob to bed, then lay down beside him and stared into the darkness through many wakeful hours.

In the morning he was not only contrite, but badly frightened, yet when he undertook to make his peace he found her unexpectedly mild.

"If you're sorry, that's all I ask," she said. "I changed my mind during the night."

"Never again!" he promised, feelingly. "I thought I had cured myself." Lorelei smiled at him faintly. "Cured! It took ten years to work the damage—it will probably take ten years to repair it."

Bob was agast. "Good heavens! In ten years I'll be too old to drink! I'd tremble so that I'd spill it. But where did you get this dope?"

"I've been reading. I've been talking to a doctor, too. You see, I wanted to help."

"Let's change doctors. Ten years! It can't be done."

"I'm afraid you're right. There's no such thing as reformation. If you're a born alcoholic you'll probably die a drunkard. I'm hoping that you didn't inherit the taste."

"Well, whether it was left to me or whether I bought it, I can't go dry for ten years."

"Then our bargain is ended."

He looked up sharply. "Oh no, it isn't!"

"Yes."

He extended a shaking hand, and his voice was supplicating as he said: "I can't get along without you, kid. You're a part of me—the vital part. I'd go to pieces quick if you quit now."

"When we made our agreement I meant to live up to every bit of it. Lorelei told him, gently, "but we're going to try again, for this was Jim's fault."

"Jim? Jim was sorry for me. He tried to cheer—"

Lorelei's smile was bitter. "Jim was never sorry for anybody except himself. My family hate you just as your family hate me, and they'd like to separate us."

"Say, that's pretty rotten!" Bob exclaimed. "If he weren't your brother I'd—"

Lorelei laughed mirthlessly. "Go ahead! I wish you would. It might clear the atmosphere."

"Then I will." After a moment he continued, "I suppose you feel you must go on supporting them?"

"Or course."

"Just as you feel you must support me. Is it entirely duty in my case?" Seeing her hesitate, he insisted, "Isn't there any love at all?"

"I'm afraid not, Bob."

The man pondered silently. "I suppose if I were the right sort," he said, at length, with some difficulty, "I'd let you go under these circumstances. Well, I'm not the right sort; I'm not big or noble. If Barleycorn brothers like me I'll go under. But if I go under I'll take you with me. I won't give you up. I won't!"

"I shan't let you pull me down," she told him, soberly.

When Bob reached the financial district next day and resumed his quest for work he was abashed with resentment at himself and at the world in general.

He took up the search with a dogged determination that was quite unlike him. One after another he canvassed his friends for a position, and finally, as if ill fortune could not withstand his fervor, he was successful. It was not much of a job that was offered him, but he snapped at it, and returned home that evening in the best of humor. Already the serious issues of the morning were but a memory; he burst in upon Lorelei like a gale, shouting:

"I'm chalk-boy at Crossett & Meyers, so you can give Bergman your notice tonight."

"What's the salary?"

"It isn't a salary; it's a humiliation—twenty-five a week is the total insult."

"Why, Bob! That won't keep two and the family—"

"The family!" He quieted himself with an effort. "Well, you give your notice, anyhow. I'll spear the coin for both establishments somehow. Come! I insist. I want to be able to shave myself without blushing."

Lorelei's objections were not easily overcome, but at last, in view of the fact that the summer run of the Revue was drawing to a close and the show would soon take to the road, she allowed herself to be persuaded.

Throughout the next week Bob Wharton really tried to make good. He was enthusiastic; the excitement of actual accomplishment was so novel that he had not time to think of liquor.

When Saturday came and he found himself in possession of honest earnings he felt a soul-satisfying ease. He decided to invest his first savings in a present for Lorelei, then a graver sense of responsibility seized him, and he sent them to Mrs. Knight.

Then he set out to find Jim. At Tony the Barber's shop, in the rear room, he found his brother-in-law playing cards with a pop-eyed youth and a repellent person with a cauliflower ear.

Bob's greeting was hearty. "Evening, James," he cried. "Feel like taking your beating here?"

"Hi? What's the matter?" Jim rose from his chair with a shocked intensity of gaze.

"I've come to return your last call. Alas, James, I am a weak vessel! Your work was coarse, but I felt for it." To the other occupants of the room he apologized. "I'm sorry to spoil your little game of authors, but necessity prods me." He extended a muscular hand for Jim's collar and found it.

Mr. Armistead was of the emotional kind; he went to the rescue of his friend, but when Bob's fist buried itself in the spongy region of Mr. Armistead's belt buckle that young man promptly lost all interest in Jimmy Knight's affairs. He sat down heavily, desperately concerned with a strange difficulty in breathing.

Alert, aggressive, Bob turned to face the man with the swollen ear; but young Sullivan, being a professional fighter, made no capital of amateur affairs, and declined the issue with an upraised palm.

It was no difficult matter to chastise Jim, whose spirit was as wretched as his strength; as the wind whips a flag, as a man flaps a dusty garment, so did Bob shake his victim. Jim struggled, he clawed, he kicked, he yelled; his arms thrashed loosely, like the limber appendages to a stuffed figure.

When Bob emerged from the rear room he found the barber shop in confusion. Tony was leading a charge, but he fell back at sight of the flushed victor.

"It was nothing but a little family affair," Bob reassured him. "Now, if you please, I'll borrow a hairbrush." In front of a mirror he tidied himself, settled his scarf with a deft jerk, then went out whistling. As it was nearly closing time for the matinees, he strolled toward the Circuit theater, full of a satisfying contentment with the world. Now that he owed it nothing, he resolved to meet his future obligations as they arose.

Early on Monday morning Bob reported for work, only to receive from Mr. Crossett, whom he had always regarded as a warm friend, the notice of his discharge.

"What's the matter? Didn't I make good?" he demanded.

Crossett was a young man; more than once he and Bob had scandalized Broadway; some of their exploits were epic. Now he shrugged carelessly, saying:

"Oh, you made good, I guess; but we can't take a chance with you."

"I suppose you're afraid I'll steal some of your chalk. Now tell me, how did you wet your feet, and whence comes the lay drift?"

"Well, from the direction of Pittsburgh, if you must know. There's a can tied to you, and we can't afford to antagonize the whole steel trust."

"I see. I'm afraid I'll have to disown that father-of mine."

"What's the trouble, anyhow?"

At Bob's explanation Crossett whistled. "Funny I didn't hear about it. Married and happy, eh? Well, I'm sorry I can't help you—"

"We Can't Afford to Antagonize the Whole Steel Trust."

"You can. Lead me five hundred."

"Certainly!" Crossett lunged at his desk, scribbled a line to the cashier, and handed it to Bob, then, in response to a call from the customers' room, dashed away with a hearty farewell.

As Bob passed through the outer office he ran his eye over the opening prices, being half inclined to "scalp" with his sudden wealth; but luck had never run his way, and he reconsidered. Anyhow, there were more agreeable uses to which he could put this money; for one thing, he needed several suits; for another, it was high time he gave Lorelei some little remembrance—he hadn't given her a present in nearly two weeks, and women set great store by such attentions. He decided to invest the money in Maiden Lane and demand credit from his tailor. But a half-hour at a jewelry shop convinced him that nothing suitable to so splendid a creature as his wife could be purchased for a paltry five hundred dollars, and he was upon the point of returning to Crossett with a request to double the loan when his common sense asserted itself. Poverty was odious, but not shameful, he reflected; ostentation, on the other hand, was vulgar. Would it not be in bad taste to squander this happy windfall upon jewelry when Lorelei needed practical things?

Bob was cheered by the breadth of these sentiments; they showed that he was beginning soberly to realize the leader responsibilities of a family man. No, instead of a jewel he would buy his wife a dog.

At a fashionable uptown kennel he found exactly what he wanted, in the shape of a Pekingese—a playful, pedigreed pocket dog scarcely larger than his two fists. It was a creature to excite the admiration of any woman; its family tree was taller than that of a Spanish nobleman, and its name was King. But here again Bob was handicapped by poverty, for sleeve dogs are expensive novelties, and the price of King was seven hundred dollars—marked down from one thousand, and evidently the bargain of a lifetime at that price.

Bob hated to haggle, but he showed that his ability to drive a sharp bargain was merely latent, and he finally bore the animal away in triumph. To outgeneral a dog fancier was a tribute to his shrewdness; to save two hundred dollars on a single purchase was economy of a high order. Much elated, he set out briskly for his tailor's place of business.

"How extraordinary! Can you ac-

"No, mum, unless it is that I'm good-looking—not that I say I am, but the lady says to me: 'Your master has a liking for pretty faces and is a good judge of beauty.'"

"Well, I just looked at her and said that from what I could see of things her husband had made at least one mistake. When I come to my senses I was lying at the foot of the steps with my box on top of me."

One of those dear old absent minded professors came to visit a married niece and to see the two-year-old baby he had never seen before. He listened to a fascinating

"Oh, my yes!" said the mother. "Why, he's been walking nine months."

The pleasant o. g. lapsed into another fit of abstraction.

"He must have gone quite a ways in that time!"

"I must recuperate," she said. "My beauty is beginning to fade."

"That so?" said the proprietor. "What makes you think so?"

"The men are beginning to count their change."

She got her holiday.

If you don't happen to have rabbits of your own, copy the ones in this picture. These are called Silhouettes or shadow pictures. Can you tell what each one is doing? Draw one at a time and make your rabbits much larger than any in this group.
